

CONTENTS

(Vol XXIV, No.6) | September 2013

ON THE COVER Dig for prehistory: Operation Nightingale gets to grips with the aftermath of badger interference at Chisenbury Midden on Salisbury Plain.

CREDIT: Markus Milligan

UP FRONT

Letters

Your comments, complaints, and compliments

4

News

Evolving English Heritage; Laid to rest: Mersea's mystery burial; Maryport's Roman temple revealed; Getting ahead at Binchester; Canterbury's campus finds; Exceeding Greatham expectations; Meet the Mary Rose archer

6

FEATURES

RETURN TO STAR CARR

Discovering the true size of a Mesolithic settlement

New research at the type site for early Mesolithic studies is set to overturn traditional thinking about northern Europe's first settlers.

12

TIME HEALS

Digging Caerwent with Operation Nightingale

We visited this pioneering project, which uses archaeological fieldwork to aid the recovery of wounded servicemen, at an enigmatic Roman site in Wales.

20

BIRLEY FIELDS

The archaeology and history of Victorian streetscapes

Tracing the transformation of life in a Manchester suburb, and how social memory can illuminate the past.

28

MICK ASTON: 1946-2013

A tribute

Remembering our friend and colleague Mick Aston, in his own words and those of his Time Team family.

34

REGULARS

48

Mick's Dig Diary

42

In his final column for CA, Mick teaches us the golden rule of studying historic landscapes: go out and look!

Last word

44

Andrew Selkirk commemorates Mick Aston: the hermit who changed archaeology forever.

Reviews

46

Shakespeare's London Theatreland; The Anglo-Saxon World; Men from the Ministry; A Forged Glamour

Sherds

48

Chris Catling's irreverent take on heritage issues

Odd Socs

50

The Emery Walker Trust and the William Morris Society