

p. 42

p. 48

Cover The invisible enemy should not exist (Room F, Panel F-10, Northwest Palace of Nimrud) (detail), 2019, Michael Rakowitz (b. 1973), Middle Eastern food packaging and newspapers, glue and cardboard on wooden structures, 89 x 83cm. Photo: Arturo Sanchez; courtesy the artist and Jane Lombard Gallery; © the artist
See feature on pp.34-40

13 Editor's Letter

14 Agenda

May highlights

16 Forum

Will the London art market bounce back?

18 Diary

Xavier F. Salomon tracks down a lost Valadier masterpiece in Nicaragua

20 Diary

Isabella Smith is transported to imperial China, via the small screen

23 Letter

Samuel Reilly retraces the footsteps of Joan Eardley in Glasgow

26 Advertising Feature

The Swiss museums combining art and nature to dazzling effect

28 Architecture

Charles Holland on the 'progressive classicism' of Raymond Erith

30 Inquiry

Debika Ray asks why Narendra Modi wants to remake New Delhi

Features

34 Monuments Man

Michael Rakowitz talks to Daniel Trilling about recreating lost artefacts and making new kinds of memorials

42 Making a Stink

Jon Day sniffs out the subtle connections between the visual arts and smell over the centuries

48 Class Menagerie

The former Louvre director Pierre Rosenberg tells Susan Moore about his collection of French art and Murano-glass animals

56 Playing House

Oliver Cox considers the history of country-house exhibitions in museums – and the way forward in more contentious times